National Microwave Oven Day

Your electric cooperative, your trusted energy adviser that strives to help you save money on electric bills, reminds you: Microwaves use about 60% as much energy as full-size ovens.

BECAUSE OF HENRY COLE, we have Christmas Card Day, which falls on December 9.

Cole, an Englishman, sent the first Christmas card—in 1843.

He fretted over the new custom of sending personalized letters to all his friends. He simply didn't have the time.

So he printed up 1,000 postcards, below, with the greeting "A Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year to You."

Wreaths for the Fallen

THOUSANDS OF VOLUNTEERS across the country will honor veterans December 17 by laying wreaths at graves on National Wreaths Across America Day. In Texas, 210,000 wreaths are expected to be placed at 300 locations. We featured Texans' involvement in this endeavor in Circle of Life in November 2018.

Wreaths Across America grew out of an effort that began in 1992, when Worcester Wreath Co. in Harrington, Maine, had extra wreaths near the end of its busy holiday season. The business arranged for the surplus wreaths to be delivered to Arlington National Cemetery and placed on headstones.

I was “buffaloed” by Bison at the Brink [October 2022]. I’m proud to know a Texan was responsible for saving buffalo from extinction in the U.S., but I was stunned the credit was repeatedly given to Charles Goodnight, even though the writer casually acknowledges that his “herd had been gathered and nurtured by his wife, Mary Ann Goodnight, who personally saw to it that the orphans found wandering the ranch were saved and protected.”

That’s the only time her name appeared. It’s a shame we can’t give credit where credit is due.

Roll Out the Red Carpet

All Texans know the striking blush and cheery chirps of our other state bird: the northern cardinal

BY MIKE LEGGETT
ILLUSTRATION BY SARAH FERONE

JUST ABOUT everyone knows that the northern mockingbird is Texas' state bird. But there's another bird we all know that is common throughout our state, nesting and feeding in brush and trees close to our homes and out in the pastures.

Some know it as the redbird, but it's correctly called the northern cardinal. This strikingly colored bird is known for its happy chirping calls that can go on all day and for the beautiful crest and orange bill of the adults.

Cardinals are the first birds we hear and see hopping around in the brush outside our houses in the mornings. They are the last birds to go to bed every night, which makes them common prey for screech owls and other raptors. But if we ever get around to reconsidering Texas' allegiance to the mockingbird, I suggest we consider the northern cardinal. After all, at least seven other states have chosen the cardinal as their own state bird.

The redbird is ubiquitous, especially in the winter since it doesn't migrate, showing up everywhere from the border country of South Texas to the prairies of the Panhandle. All Texans know the cardinal.

Growing up in the tiny East Texas community of DeBerry in the 1950s, I spent a goodly portion of my young life walking the pastures and open fields around our house. I knocked off more than my share of sparrows, starlings and brown-headed cowbirds as an eager beaver hunter with a BB gun.

I once made a long, long shot with my pellet rifle to kill what we called a French mockingbird. I know that bird now as the shrike, or butcher bird, named for its habit of hanging things it chases down on mesquite thorns and sharpened spikes on barbed wire fences.

I was not allowed, however, to shoot any of the small group of colorful songbirds that lived and nested near our home. The mockingbird was the state bird then, and I feared that could have gotten me locked up.

My dad, who established the shooting list at our house, probably would have pounded me for killing that shrike if he'd known about it. I kept that quiet. But Dad had a long list of birds with bright colors that I would have been in real trouble if I'd killed. Cardinals were his favorites and first on his protected list, followed by blue jays, bluebirds, scissor-tailed flycatchers and the always cooperative killdeer. Dad loved the way adult killdeers would feign injury and try to lead predators away from their babies and nests.

The beloved cardinal eats mostly seeds and nests around the edges of openings in low brush, especially in the cedar trees of Central Texas. We once had a nest that was built about thigh high in a cenizo just off the front porch of our house. I watched those pinkish eggs for a couple of weeks, until they hatched into three of the ugliest pink babies you could imagine.

The babies got stronger and bigger and were just about to fledge when the nest was robbed by a Texas rat snake that had taken up residence in our flower bed. That was a sad morning when I found the nest emptied and the adults off squawking in the live oaks in the roundabout a few yards away.

There is a similar bird, actually another member of the cardinal family, known as a pyrrhuloxia. The male has a striking crest that's larger than the cardinal's but is colored mostly gray and crimson. They are common on ranches in South Texas during the winter. Their beaks are much more parrotlike than the cardinal's obvious seed-cracking orange beak.

One ranch where I hunt has repurposed fiberglass water tanks buried in the ground for use as bow blinds. The rancher has piled dirt and brush on top of them and put one-way glass windows at eye level as you stand. It's exciting to watch the male red cardinals flit through the trees as they scout for safe feeding spots on the ground.

Often they land just outside the windows where I can study them closely from just a couple feet away. It's fascinating to watch them pick up a kernel of corn and quickly demolish it to get at the sweet meat inside. There's comfort in that tiny, mighty act—in knowing that Texans yet to come will delight in the redbird. ■

Christmas Ritual

Las Posadas sustains a centuries-old Mexican reenactment of the biblical story

AS THE LIGHT FADES on a chilly December evening, a row of luminarias glows against the white facade of the Presidio Chapel of San Elizario. The luminarias, paper bags containing lit candles, outline an adobe museum next to the 140-year-old church and extend around the plaza and on down the streets, giving the night a festive feel.

In the tree-lined plaza, a group of young people in costume gathers next to a gazebo. This is a dress rehearsal for Las Posadas, which translates as “the inns” and refers to a procession or play that reenacts the biblical story of Mary and Joseph seeking shelter in Bethlehem and the birth of Jesus. This telling of the Christmas story originated in 16th-century Mexico and continues there and in cities and towns north of the Rio Grande with musicians and costumed children going from house to house on Christmas Eve.

San Elizario, southeast of El Paso, has strong historic ties to Mexico, and the San Elizario Genealogy and Historical Society has staged a mostly annual Las Posadas as part of its Luminarias Festival for some 20 years. Lillian Trujillo, president of the organization, says many of the participants are teens from San Elizario Catholic Church.

“Sometimes we have to talk them into it; they’re shy,” Trujillo says. “We tell them that they don’t have to speak, that it’s just dressing up and walking around.” Older kids and adults sometimes fill in any gaps. For years, the costumes were an assortment of donated and leftover items, but in 2021, the society received enough donations to buy new ones.

As the dress rehearsal wraps up, people spill from the church where Mass has just ended, joining a crowd beneath the trees. Dozens of small children play in the leaves. Customers line up at a food truck at the back of the plaza. Las Posadas begins.

Students playing Mary and Joseph—the former perched on a real, live mule—make their way past the steps of the church, the mule’s hooves clapping on the pavement. In the gazebo, Trujillo reads the Christmas story aloud, her voice projected over speakers, as an “innkeeper” at the top of the steps turns the couple away. They continue on to the gazebo, where they settle on bales of hay, and the girl playing Mary pulls a baby doll from under her robe.

Youngsters dressed as wise men step forward to present their gifts: boxes representing gold, frankincense and myrrh. Under a nearby tree, the angels tell those dressed as shepherds the news of the baby’s arrival, and they all make their way into the gazebo to see him. The story is familiar to everyone here.

Las Posadas complete, the players scatter, some pausing to pet the placid mule. In front of the museum, boys and girls from a local folklórico class in traditional dress entertain the crowd with lively dances. Then the youngest kids take turns having a go at a giant piñata. Finally, Santa Claus shows up in a firetruck, sirens blaring and lights flashing, to hand out toys. The night ends with a drawing for bicycles, and every child entered takes home a shiny new bike and helmet, thanks to generous donations.

OPPOSITE Students reenact the biblical story of Mary and Joseph, who, led by angels, seek shelter in Bethlehem before the birth of Jesus.

The church sits at the center of the community, literally and figuratively. In San Elizario, as in other small towns all along the Rio Grande, church bells once served as a timekeeper, ringing at noon to signal lunch break; when it was time for Mass; and to announce weddings, baptisms and deaths.

THE COMMUNITY spends weeks preparing for the festival, which is held on the second or third Saturday of December—December 17 this year.

Local families founded the San Elizario Genealogy and Historical Society in 1997 after a conversation at a family reunion about the importance of passing this area's rich history on to younger generations. Board member Elizabeth Baker-Teran's parents, Teresa and Miguel Teran, were among the founders. "They wanted to preserve the genealogical history of the families of San Elizario and the historical buildings that are still there and to educate the public about the hundreds of years of history," Baker-Teran says.

That history includes construction of the presidio chapel by the Spanish for members of the military and their families in 1788. That first chapel flooded in 1829, and another was built to take its place. In 1877, the existing, larger church was built. Its walls were repainted and the current electric lights installed in the 1950s. The Stations of the Cross on the walls inside date back to about 1918.

OPPOSITE A service inside the Presidio Chapel of San Elizario, which is listed on the National Register of Historic Places. ABOVE Folklorico students perform dances that trace their origins to Indigenous peoples of Mexico.

of Mexico. In the 1829 flood, the river cut a new channel, leaving all three churches on the northern bank. When the U.S. declared the deepest channel of the Rio Grande as the international boundary with Mexico in 1848, these communities became part of the U.S.

The Los Portales Museum occupies a circa-1850 building in San Elizario and tells the area's history. The exhibit room is small but contains a wealth of maps, photos and descriptions of significant events and everyday life in the area. At one point, the town supported a trade in salt from the Guadalupe Mountains. Local farmers employed a complex irrigation system to grow grapes, pears, onions and wheat, which was ground in a private gristmill.

Trujillo says that for many of the families that attend the Christmas festival, the evening fittingly has been about holiday fun. For Trujillo, whose family has been here since the 1700s, an annual Las Posadas is part of keeping that history alive. ■

San Elizario anchors the El Paso Mission Trail, which includes two other historic missions. The Ysleta Mission, originally built in 1680, is considered the first and oldest mission established in Texas and is the second-oldest continually active Catholic parish in the U.S. The original Socorro Mission was completed in 1691, making it the second-oldest Texas mission; the current building dates to 1843.

Socorro Road, which runs from Ysleta to Socorro to San Elizario, is the designated Mission Trail. The 9-mile route follows a segment of the El Camino Real de Tierra Adentro (Royal Road of the Interior), a trade and supply route that ran from Mexico City to present-day Santa Fe, New Mexico, linking communities, missions and presidios. The oldest road in North America and once the longest, El Camino Real, or what remains of it, was designated as a National Historic Trail in 2000.

On November 22, 1963, President John F. Kennedy was assassinated in Dallas, Texas. To pay tribute to the beloved American President, Congress authorized the abrupt ending of the Franklin Half Dollar series, replacing it with the Kennedy Half Dollar. Following its release in January 1964, just two months after the tragic assassination, this Kennedy Half Dollar became the year's most sought-after American coin!

The president's wife, Jackie Kennedy, was given the choice of denomination and chose the Half Dollar because she did not want to see George Washington removed from the quarter. Interest in this first-year issue coins was very high, and people lined the streets outside the Treasury Building to obtain the coin.

The Only Kennedy Half Dollar Struck in 90% Silver

This 1964 Kennedy Half Dollar is a first and only—first year of issue and the only

Kennedy Half Dollar struck for circulation in 90% silver. The U.S. Mint reduced the silver content to 40% the next year in 1965—where it stayed until 1971 when the Mint again changed the content to copper-nickel.

It's surprising that any of these coins still exist because when the price of silver skyrocketed in the 1980's, and again in 2011, people melted countless numbers of these coins for the precious metal, leaving only a fraction of the original mintages, and making them more difficult to find.

Merry Christmas From TVEC

THE HOLIDAYS ARE a time of reflection. I'm grateful for my own family as well as my co-op family at Trinity Valley Electric Cooperative. We're driven by a sense of mission and purpose, and our team feels a strong connection to our community and our members because we live here too.

While many of our community-focused programs and activities ramp up this time of year, we have several programs and services in place to help our members year-round. I'd like to remind you about some of these offerings in hopes you'll find them beneficial.

We hope you'll take advantage of our myTVEC mobile app, which empowers you to monitor your electricity usage, manage daily alerts and reminders, and pay your energy bill through your phone. 60198485001

Our Operation Round Up program helps the most vulnerable members of our community. By simply rounding up your electric bills to the next whole dollar, you can help your neighbors. Through members' generous donations over the years, we've been able to give $3.2 million to area charitable causes. You can find a list of grant recipients on tvec.net.

One of the most important investments we make is in our local youths. TVEC awards thousands of dollars in education scholarships through the 23 high schools in our service area. And each year, through our Government-in-Action Youth Tour program, we send high school students to Washington, D.C., for an immersive weeklong experience of democracy in action.

At the heart of all of these programs is you—the members we proudly serve. Looking back, I'm grateful for so many wonderful community partners and for the positive impact we can continue to make.

This holiday season, I wish you and your loved ones peace, joy and prosperity. Speaking on behalf of our team at TVEC, I know the future will be bright because of you. ■

Cost adjustment will drop to one cent in December

AS NATURAL GAS PRICES SPIKED during the heat of summer, wholesale energy prices went up as well, leading to adjustments in the power cost recovery factor on Trinity Valley Electric Cooperative members' bills.

Thankfully, energy prices have come back down somewhat, and the plan for upcoming PCRF charges has been adjusted accordingly.

In our August magazine, December bills were projected to have a $0.025 (two and a half cents) per kWh charge. That has been reduced to a $.01 (one cent) per kWh charge instead.

The energy market is very volatile right now, and we will be monitoring and adjusting as market conditions change. At the time of this publication, we anticipate a 1 cent PCRF in January as well.

For more information about the PCRF adjustment on your bill, please refer to the description of the charge on the back of your bill.

As a nonprofit electric cooperative, energy costs are not marked up for members, and our rate covers the cost of all transmission and delivery charges. The PCRF is designed to allow the co-op to adjust for changes in energy prices, which includes lowering rates whenever possible as well.

During this time of increased energy costs, any efforts to reduce energy consumption will be even more beneficial, both on your bill and to the co-op.

Saving money on your electricity bill is always a good idea, but with wholesale power driving the cost up, every energy-saving trick in the book will mean a little bit more.

MANAGEMENT
SUPERVISOR

CHRIS WALKER, BAP

Give the Gift of Energy Savings

IT'S DECEMBER, and Christmas will be here before you know it, which means it's time to finish up your holiday shopping. But if you're like me, you might still be struggling to find the perfect gift for that one family member who's just plain impossible to shop for. When that's the case, I often turn to a category of gifts that keep on giving: energy-efficient gadgets.

In the role of energy management supervisor, I get to spend a lot of time thinking about the value of conserving electricity. In fact, as a not-for-profit organization, Trinity Valley Electric Cooperative encourages our members to conserve—because when you save, the co-op saves, and those savings ultimately get passed on to co-op members.

WALIK | ISTOCK.COM

So as you tackle your holiday shopping for those hard-to-please loved ones this month, consider some of these energy-saving gift ideas to help your friends and family save money year-round:

Smart TVs and streaming devices.

If the person you're shopping for doesn't already have a smart TV with streaming apps on it, a streaming device like a Roku, Chromecast, or Amazon Fire Stick could be a great gift. Of course, streaming videos will consume energy no matter the technology you're using, but newer LED TVs have improved energy efficiency, and eliminating another streaming device or gaming system can reduce energy consumption and phantom loads.

Smart speakers. Smart speakers like those from Amazon and Google are not only designed to be energy efficient but can also be used to monitor other smart devices in your home to optimize energy use. Paired with smart thermostats and other home automation, these technological assistants can help you conserve.

Solar-powered charging banks. Anyone with a cellphone knows that at some point, the battery is going to run low when they're far from an outlet. A portable battery is a great solution to get that extra boost for your phone to make it through the day, and it doesn't get more energy efficient than a charger that harnesses the power of the sun.

Smart thermostat. About half of the average American home's annual energy bill goes to heating and cooling costs, according to the U.S. Energy Information Administration. One way to curb those costs is by installing a smart thermostat, which can learn a household's routine and adjust temperatures accordingly.

LED lightbulbs and lamps. Though lightbulbs might not make for the most exciting gifts, LED bulbs can be great stocking stuffers that'll save energy and money over time. For a more compelling present, consider buying an LED lamp that your loved one can use to cozy up with a book this winter or voice-activated LED light strips that can change color.

Kitchen countertop appliances.

Electric griddles, air fryers, waffle makers and slow cookers make for great energy-efficient gifts that can also reduce cooking times.

Here at TVEC, we believe our members should enjoy all the comforts that modern technology provides without paying an arm and a leg. So this holiday season, give your loved ones a gift that saves. ■

Applications Open for 2023 Government-in-Action Youth Tour

Fond memories and life lessons continue for past tour winner

SIX YEARS AFTER PARTICIPATING in the Government-in-Action Youth Tour, Haylee Smith still sees the trip as a life-changing experience.

“I wasn’t really sure what to expect because it was a new place and a lot of new people,” she said. “Coming back from Youth Tour and moving on into college and my career, I felt comfortable because meeting and speaking with new people didn’t seem as foreign.”

Smith was involved in current events and social studies events at Cayuga High School when her counselor mentioned the Youth Tour opportunity. “I was really interested in going to see the places I had actually read about,” Smith explained.

As with any new adventure, winning students must face some unknowns heading into the Youth Tour experience. For Smith, overcoming the fear was worth it, and after a few days it was clear that this would be a special trip.

“Some of the people I was meeting were from West Texas in the desert and I was from the Piney Woods. We got to learn about different things and different people and where they come from. Even at the dances that we learned growing up, they have their own different spin if they are from a different state or area.”

Tour participants take a quick trip to Austin to visit the state Capitol and visit the state cemetery. In Washington, D.C., the students tour many museums and get to meet their members of Congress, hear inspirational speakers and interact with other Youth Tour participants from across the country. Texas students also have the chance to participate in a wreath-laying ceremony at Arlington National Cemetery, see the Sunset Parade at the Marine Corps War Memorial, and visit several government institutions and the U.S. Capitol.

Smith really enjoyed seeing the Lincoln Memorial because it is so iconic—a unique treat since she shares a birthday with Abraham Lincoln.

The Youth Tour trip also boasts a few unexpected surprises that go beyond the typical tourist destinations.

“A unique memory I have is while we were at the National Mall,” Smith said. “They bought us pizza and we were so tired that we ate and took a nap on the lawn of the National Mall. It’s one of my favorite memories of the trip.”

Smith’s advice to future applicants is “take the chance and do it. It shows you the world is big and even your country is big. It’s important to actually go see those things for yourself.”

Visit tvec.net/youth-tour/ to get an application. Applications are due by January 16, 2023. ■

TVEC Board of Directors Approves $4.1 Million Capital Credits Retirement

Members from 1994 will see refunds

AS A NONPROFIT ELECTRIC COOPERATIVE, any revenue beyond what is used for the co-op's expenses is not profit sent to shareholders. Instead, at the end of each year, that money is allocated to members in proportion to electricity purchased, and serves as members' investment in the co-op's infrastructure. This is the system known as capital credits.

As determined by the board of directors, whenever the co-op's financial situation allows, this money is returned to members.

In their regular October meeting, the TVEC board approved just over $4.1 million in capital credits returns to be disbursed in 2022. This encompasses all remaining capital credits for 1994.

By refunding the co-op's oldest capital credits, TVEC continues to bring forward the overall outstanding credits to current members.

"In 1994 we had a particularly large operating margin, meaning that the allotted money for refunding capital credits this year will all go to those members based on our equity management plan," said Bobby White, TVEC chief financial officer. "We like to use a hybrid method, when we can, so that more members see a credit, but in this case we want to keep our trend of retiring all of the oldest year's credits first."

Current members who purchased electricity from TVEC in 1994 will see their refunds on bills mailed in December.

This year's capital credits retirement will distribute money to more than 22,000 current and former TVEC members. ■

How much will I receive?

Capital credits are allocated based on the amount of electricity purchased each year. That means that refund amounts vary greatly.

Only members who purchased electricity from TVEC in 1994 will have refunds this year.

When will refunds arrive?

Current members will see their refund as a credit on their bill that is mailed to them in December. That means some members will get them in December, while later billing cycles will arrive in early January.

Former members who have moved out of will receive checks at the address we have on file for them in mid- to late- December. If you have a friend or family member that is a former TVEC member, please encourage them to update their address with us to expedite their capital credits return.

'Tis the Season for Extension Cords

'TIS THE SEASON TO unpack the extension cords and plug way too many devices into them. Decorating for Christmas with lights, inflatable lawn ornaments, projectors and music might lead festive families to commit safety blunders—and chief among them is the misuse of extension cords.

Here are 10 tips from Electrical Safety Foundation International for using extension cords properly this holiday season.

1. Never plug an extension cord into another extension cord. They're not designed for that kind of electrical load.
2. Choose an extension cord designed for outdoor use if you plan to use it outside.
3. Inspect your cords for damage, like cracks and loose wires. If they're not in good shape, replace them.
4. Avoid hiding an extension cord under a rug. The cord could overheat and set the rug on fire.
5. Buy cords only if they're approved by UL or another independent testing laboratory.
6. Keep cords away from water and snow.
7. Instead of nailing or stapling cords to your gutters or walls when you use them to power strands of holiday lights, use plastic hangers that won't puncture the cords.
8. Don't remove the third prong of a three-prong plug to force it into a two-prong outlet. Instead, buy an adapter.
9. Put your extension cords away with your holiday decorations. They're designed for temporary, not permanent, use.
10. Avoid overloading a multiple-slot extension cord with too many devices. That cord has to plug into an outlet that can overheat if you overload it. ■

Watch Out for Fa-la-la-la Fakes

WHETHER YOU'RE BUYING lights to trim the tree or power tools to wrap as gifts, beware of bogus bounty this holiday season.

Many home products are illegally counterfeited, placing the purchaser—or the recipient of the perilous present—in danger of using faulty electrical equipment that doesn't meet safety standards.

As you do your holiday shopping, inspect your purchases for a mark from a reputable product safety testing organization, like CSA International or UL. Here are some tips to help you spot illegal counterfeiting.

If the product has an unbelievably low price, it's probably a fake. Compare the prices and warranties of similar products.

Touch and examine the product. Counterfeits are often light and feel cheaply made.

Check for misspellings or unclear printing on labels, packaging and instructions.

Poorly designed or unclear packaging with only partial illustrations could be a sign of a fake.

Look for missing items in the product box and for items that appear different from those described on the packaging.

Don't count on the retailer to weed out the offending merchandise. Even reputable vendors can be duped. ■

High Transaction Fees Add Costs

WITH HIGH INFLATION AFFECTING GOODS and services across the marketplace, it is no surprise that operating expenses have gone up here at Trinity Valley Electric Cooperative as well.

And while we can't affect the price of gas or groceries, we are looking at all of the co-op's expenses to keep costs down for members.

One way we are trying to help save money for members is in reducing the cost of payment transactions. Those costs reached a whopping $750,000 in 2021 alone. By using lower-cost methods of payment, members can help reduce those expenses and help us keep energy costs low.

For those of you who have already changed to bank draft or e-check payments, thank you! If you haven't taken that step, please consider doing so and help us all save together.

Thank you from all of us here at TVEC. ■

November Energy Quiz: Miles of TVEC Power Lines

COVERING PARTS OF SIX counties, Trinity Valley Electric Co-op's electric distribution system has surpassed 8,000 miles—enough line to circle the continental United States.

The first 100 miles of line were completed by Kaufman County EC in 1938, and New Era EC in Athens began serving members in 1940. The two entities combined in 1997 to form TVEC.

Operation Round Up Spotlight: Bee-Happy Day Program

Bee-Happy Day Program's "Busy Bees" say thank you to TVEC members after receiving an Operation Round Up grant.

NOW LOCATED IN DOWNTOWN KAUFMAN, the Bee-Happy Day Program seeks to serve adults with special needs with unique resources and programs.

It all started when Shelley Brookins met a married couple in their 30s with intellectual disabilities who were home-bound. They longed to be involved in the community and take part in social events and activities. Unable to afford to attend a state supported day habilitation program in a neighboring city, the couple began to struggle with anxiety and depression.

Brookins' research found that out that most individuals who are intellectually disabled are on waiting lists for 15 years or more and there were not any private pay facilities offering affordable day programs.

"God began to speak and provided a vision to create Bee-Happy Day Program," Brookins said. She then created a prayer strategy plan for the vision and prayer warriors went to work across the U.S. "Through these prayers God has provided evidence that he wants to meet the needs of people seeking these types of programs."

Services being provided at Bee-Happy Day Program are daily living skills, exercise programs, social and emotional skills, arts and crafts, gardening, teamwork skills, personal goal setting, and field trips.

"The money will go towards people who can't afford to pay the full amount to attend, it will get applied to make up the difference to pay rent, electricity, and internet service," Brookins said.

Clients are charged on a sliding scale based on income, with rates from no charge to $30 per day.

"We don't turn anyone away due to finances," Brookins said. "Any money we raise, any money that is granted to us helps us pay the bills. No matter what your income is and no matter where you are in life, we want to make sure you are provided for."

The program is currently open three days per week with the plan of opening five days per week starting in September 2023. Another goal over the next year for Bee-Happy is to raise enough funds to bring in and have paid employees so they can provide for more people.

SACRED STONE OF THE SOUTHWEST IS ON THE BRINK OF EXTINCTION

Centuries ago, Persians, Tibetans and Mayans considered turquoise a gemstone of the heavens, believing the striking blue stones were sacred pieces of sky. Today, the rarest and most valuable turquoise is found in the American Southwest—but the future of the blue beauty is unclear.

On a recent trip to Tucson, we spoke with fourth generation turquoise traders who explained that less than five percent of turquoise mined worldwide can be set into jewelry and only about twenty mines in the Southwest supply gem-quality turquoise. Once a thriving industry, many Southwest mines have run dry and are now closed.

We found a limited supply of turquoise from Arizona and purchased it for our Sedona Turquoise Collection. Inspired by the work of those ancient craftsmen and designed to showcase the exceptional blue stone, each stabilized vibrant cabochon features a unique, one-of-a-kind matrix surrounded in Bali metalwork. You could drop over $1,200 on a turquoise pendant, or you could secure 26 carats of genuine Arizona turquoise for just $99.

TCP Listen as W.F. Strong narrates this story on our website.

A Brief but Determined Texan

Samuel Walker's violent adventures became the stuff of legend

BY W.F. STRONG

SAMUEL WALKER arrived in Texas six years after the republic won its independence. In five more years, he would be dead. But in those five years, he would defend San Antonio from Mexican forces, invade Mexico four times, escape from a Mexican prison and help design one of the most famous guns in history.

One hundred and seventy-five years later, he's also remembered as one of the most fascinating Texas Rangers of all time.

Before he was a Ranger, Walker was part of the ill-fated Mier expedition, during which 176 Texian militiamen were captured by Mexico in 1843. Gen. Antonio López de Santa Anna ordered them all shot, but cooler heads in the Mexican government prevailed, demanding one in every 10 killed instead. The Texans drew beans from a pot. Those who got one of the 17 black beans would be executed; those who drew white beans would live. Walker got a white bean.

The survivors were marched 800 miles across Mexico's brutal deserts. Once in Mexico City, Walker and some other captives were imprisoned; others were marched another 100 miles and incarcerated in the infamous Perote Prison.

There is a much-shared myth that while he was incarcerated, Walker was ordered to dig a hole for a flagpole and raise the Mexican flag. According to one version of the legend, he put a dime at the bottom of the hole and vowed to return one day, reclaim the coin and raise the Texas flag. Several years later, the story goes, he retrieved his dime when he returned with American forces.

It's a good story but probably not true. Walker never mentioned it in his journals, and the flagpole in the various versions of the myth is always in Perote Prison. Walker was never held there.

Walker eventually escaped—a story that would make a good novel in itself—and made it back to Texas. He joined up with Jack Hays and the Texas Rangers in 1844.

When Gen. Zachary Taylor sent out a call in 1845 for volunteers to scout for his federal troops, Walker immediately signed up. He ran messages through the Mexican lines to keep Fort Texas (soon to be Fort Brown) aware of Taylor's plans, and Walker led the charge in the battle for Monterrey.

It was after Taylor's forces had secured Monterrey, in 1846, that Walker took a brief furlough and traveled east. There he gave Samuel Colt some ideas for improving an earlier model of Colt's revolver. Colt, in gratitude, named a special, very heavy model—more than 4½ pounds—of his new six-shooter after the Ranger.

Walker next joined up with Gen. Winfield Scott's campaign to attack Mexico City, sacking Perote Prison on the way. But Walker would not live to make it back to Texas. He died fighting in the town of Huamantla in 1847.

Walker's body was eventually returned to San Antonio, interred in the Odd Fellows Cemetery, next to the unidentified remains of defenders of the Alamo. ■

Make room on your plates for these yummy treats this holiday season

BY MEGAN MYERS, FOOD EDITOR

December is the perfect time of year for gathering with friends and family, and for me that always means having plenty of nibbles on hand. I love serving (and eating) appetizers. Everyone gets to taste a variety of dishes, and you don't need to worry about overfilling your plate.

Jalapeño Popper Bites

8 ounces cream cheese, softened
½ cup finely shredded cheddar cheese
½ cup chopped jalapeño peppers
⅓ cup cooked and crumbled bacon
½ teaspoon salt
Pinch ground cayenne pepper (optional)
30 phyllo shells
Pickled jalapeño slices, for garnish

1. Preheat oven to 350 degrees.
2. In a bowl, combine cream cheese, cheddar, chopped jalapeños, bacon, salt and cayenne until smooth and uniformly mixed.
3. Use two spoons or a small cookie scoop to divide mixture among phyllo shells. Place filled shells on a rimmed baking sheet and bake 10 minutes, until shells are crisp and filling is just starting to brown.
4. Let cool slightly and top each shell with a slice of pickled jalapeño. Serve warm.

Crispy Coconut Shrimp

VAN FULTON
PEDERNALES EC

Homemade coconut shrimp is a wonderful appetizer for any occasion. Make sure to leave the tails on when peeling the shrimp, as it will make it easier to dip the shrimp into the coatings.

1¼ cups shredded coconut
½ cup panko breadcrumbs
½ cup flour
½ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon sugar

¼ teaspoon pepper
2 eggs
1 pound raw jumbo shrimp, defrosted, peeled and deveined
Oil for frying
Chopped fresh cilantro, for garnish
Thai sweet chili sauce, for serving

1. In a shallow bowl, combine coconut and panko. In another shallow bowl, combine flour, salt, sugar and pepper. Beat eggs in a third bowl.

2. Pat shrimp dry with paper towels. Holding by the tail, dip shrimp first into the flour mixture, coating all sides. Then dip into the egg, let excess drip off and dip into the coconut mixture, pressing gently to adhere. Place coated shrimp on a baking sheet and repeat until all shrimp are coated.

3. In a heavy-bottomed pot such as a Dutch oven, add about 2 inches of oil and heat over high to 365 degrees. Use a thermometer to monitor temperature.

4. Fry shrimp in batches until golden brown, 1–2 minutes. Drain on a rack and let cool slightly before serving.

5. Garnish with cilantro, if desired. Serve with Thai sweet chili sauce for dipping.

COURTESY CHET GARNER

A Raw Deal

Dziuk's Meat Market has perfected so-called Texas tartare

BY CHET GARNER

WHEN I THINK of all the things I've eaten on the road that were most unfamiliar, a few dishes come to mind. There was the smoked cow eyeball in Brownsville, chicken feet in Houston and deep-fried rattlesnake in Sweetwater. I had to overcome some hesitations but still finished each one. That's what I expected when I set out to try raw beef parisa at Dziuk's Meat Market. But not only did I finish my plate, I left with an entire pound for later.

Dziuk's (pronounced "jukes") has been around since the 1960s, when it was started in Poth by two brothers. Later another location opened in Castroville, west of San Antonio. It's an old-school meat market where you can buy a great steak cut to order and even bring in deer for processing. But despite selling every cut of meat your heart might desire, the most popular item remains their house-made parisa.

Parisa is a traditional dish made of raw round steak that's ground up and mixed with salt, pepper, onions, jalapeños and soft easy-melt cheese. The locals buy hundreds of pounds a week to eat with crackers and bring to family gatherings. It's a regional delicacy that, as far as I can tell, is only made at a handful of markets across Medina County. Third-generation owner Kenton Sims told me to think of it as "Texas tartare."

I plunged my saltine deep into a pile of parisa then took a deep breath and a big bite. The flavor was instantly familiar: Tex-Mex spices blended deliciously with the mouthfeel and taste of a juicy hamburger. I loved it and finished off the whole platter. Then I ordered some parisa for the road—and made sure not to leave it behind in a hot car. ■

ABOVE A platter of parisa didn't last long once Chet got ahold of it.

TCP Chet cooks up another video featuring one of his culinary adventures. Watch it on our website and see all his Texplorations on The Daytripper on PBS.

I'll Be Gone for Christmas

The gift of escaping and passing along a mother's curious nature

BY BABS RODRIGUEZ
ILLUSTRATION BY KEVIN FALES

TRAVEL DURING the Christmas season is my way of clearing my head of the clutter that can weigh down the celebration. I just need a few deep breaths beneath trees that don't have lights on them. And a spare winter landscape regenerates my spirit like nothing else.

I first discovered how meaningful such a journey could be when my son was barely school age. It was 20 years ago, just after our mom died, and my youngest brother, Jimmy, and I were struggling to reinvent the holiday season without her.

I invited Jimmy, whose eccentric education in anthropology and fishing made him an ideal camp companion, to join my son and me in a nearby state park.

As we settled into a campsite, I realized that I had been so fixated on keeping the planning minimal that I had packed no chairs, no plates, no knife. I did bring salt and pepper, a big cake of lavender soap and one plastic fork. It was a few days after I'd hosted a Christmas event for 50 people; I was so tired I was stupid.

My brother was undaunted. Before I had discovered I'd also forgotten firewood, he had chicken seasoned and cooking nicely on his portable grill—gamely making do with the single plastic utensil. I headed to a nearby store for split logs.

When I returned, my son was barefoot. In the time I'd been gone, he'd cast his rod into the lake, then waded in after it—soaking socks and shoes. He appeared delighted to be wearing leather work gloves on his feet, like some giant splay-footed bird cozied up to the grill. Uncle Jimmy was already steaming the socks dry.

After eating, we hiked to a spectacular scenic overlook. That was when I consciously noted Jimmy's pink stocking cap. The hat was familiar. And comforting. It had been knitted by our mother. In her passion for handcrafts, Mom would get stuck in loops of creativity. Jimmy was the beneficiary of the Year of the Knitted Caps. By wearing one, he brought her along.

Jimmy also inherited Mother's adaptability and resourcefulness. We both have a heaping share of her curiosity. She taught us to pause often on any walk, to study stones and insects and scat. She was monumentally successful in opening our eyes to the natural world.

After we took in the view from the overlook, we began exploring cautiously. I focused my attention on my son, introducing him to nopales and miniscule fungi. But watching Jimmy bobbing through the woods in that pink hat, I realized it was I who most needed the lessons of this day away from the holiday: a reminder to be the mother to my son that she had been to me. ■
