THE MOST ADVANCED PORTABLE MOBILITY SCOOTER IN THE WORLD

Where engineering excellence meets sleek design - a lightweight, safe, customizable, and stylish scooter for UNLIMITED FREEDOM.

Numerous scooters with various features and capabilities are on the market, making it crucial to select the one that best suits your requirements.

How did Anna start to enjoy life to the fullest?

At the age of 56, a back operation left me dependent on a cane, significantly impacting my daily life. Simple tasks like going to the store or meeting friends became challenging, and I even had to cancel a long-awaited anniversary trip to Italy.

My husband purchased a scooter for me, but it was cumbersome and uncomfortable for everyday use, leaving me feeling more constrained than liberated. However, everything changed when I came across the ATTO SPORT. This remarkable scooter proved to be a game changer. Not only is it robust and reliable, but it also conveniently splits into two pieces, allowing me to effortlessly lift it into my car trunk on my own. I was even able to stow it in the overhead compartment on the plane, enabling us to finally take that trip to Italy! I am now independent once more, able to go wherever I please and do so with a striking sense of style. In fact, I now find that my husband struggles to keep up with me!

What makes ATTO so unique?

- Independence & Convenience: Easy to use and conveniently folds into a compact suitcase size for simple storage. It easily separates into two parts in seconds, with the heaviest piece weighing just 37 pounds, making it easier to lift into your car trunk.
- Go Anywhere: Conquer any terrain with puncture-proof, shock-absorbing tires and a 4-inch ground clearance. Equipped with electronic stability control for added safety on descents and turns, it is also flight-approved, ideal for air travel and cruise ships. With a driving range of up to 12.5 miles (25 miles with the XL battery), a top speed of 6.2 MPH, and a maximum weight capacity of 300 pounds, this durable scooter is designed for longevity.
- Top-Notch Engineering: Guaranteeing both comfort and durability, this scooter offers ample legroom and a big comfortable seat. The ATTO is super portable and lightweight, and still rides like a heavy-duty scooter.
- Unmatched Stylish Design: You deserve a mobility solution that doesn't just get you from A to B but makes you feel great while doing so. ATTO stands out from the crowd with its stunning design.

Volts Charge Into Texas

AFTER A FOUR-TEAM barnstorming season in 2025, the Athletes Unlimited Softball League is set to start its second season with six teams, including one in Texas.

The Texas Volts will return and play their home games at Dell Diamond in Round Rock and join teams based in Chicago; Durham, North Carolina; Oklahoma City; Portland, Oregon; and Salt Lake City.

“Texas is synonymous with softball excellence at every level,” said Kim Ng, the league’s commissioner.

The Volts start their 25-game season June 9 in Oklahoma City. Their first home game is June 18 against the Utah Talons.

“We have simply got to make people aware that none of us are free until we’re all free, and we aren’t free yet.”

Giant Footsteps

Even as Opal Lee—the Grandmother of Juneteenth—approaches 100, she says her important work isn't done

Opal Lee says she was the “little ol’ lady in tennis shoes getting into everybody else’s business” when, in 2016, at age 89 and buoyed by her faith, she embarked on an ambitious campaign to make Juneteenth a national holiday by walking from her home in Fort Worth to Washington, D.C. Ten years later, the holiday is official, she is celebrated as the Grandmother of Juneteenth and her well-worn tennis shoes are getting a long-deserved rest.

That doesn’t mean the contemporary folk hero is finally settling into idleness—even as she approaches centenarian status (she turns 100 on October 7). And once you get a sense of her life, you realize inactivity is not a concept she embraces. Retirement?

“You’ve got to be kidding!” she quickly retorts, flashing her wide, congenial smile. “People who are old can’t sit in a rocking chair and wait for the Lord to come and get them. There’s still plenty of work to be done, and I’ll do what I can as long as I can.”

She speaks with an eloquent urgency and passion about her work over many decades as a civil rights and community activist who advocated for the homeless, jobless and hungry; for education; and for Juneteenth recognition—all of which she connects to being free. She says she fully intends to continue her work through her belief that “we are our brother’s keeper, and we’d better act like it”—but at a slower pace.

For sure, there will be no more extended walking campaigns. An illness last summer was a setback, and though she’s recovered, the episode supported growing suggestions from her family, which includes 15 grandchildren and 40 great-grandchildren, that it was time to step back a bit.

“It’s been great to see her dream come true, something she’s been after most of her life,” says Promise Roland, one of Lee’s granddaughters and a Fort Worth real estate agent. “It’s been overwhelming, but we’re delighted. She’s been asked to slow down, but that’s not her.

“With her tenacity, she’s going to keep at it; she doesn’t take no for an answer.”

Lee, a 1943 graduate, at age 16, of Fort Worth’s I.M. Terrell High School, has maximized her century on this planet with service to family, church and community. She raised her four children as a young single mother, got a bachelor’s degree in education from Wiley College in Marshall, earned a master’s degree in counseling and guidance in 1963 from North Texas State University (now the University of North Texas), and taught third grade for 15 years at Amanda McCoy Elementary School, her alma mater.

She helped start a food bank by contributing fresh produce grown in her 5-acre urban farm that also helps address Tarrant County food deserts.

She is an iconic, revered change agent, so getting into everybody else’s business—good trouble—teaching and helping others is what she does, and she does it very well. She’s received eight honorary doctorates, was named 2021 Texan of the Year by The Dallas Morning News, was a Nobel Peace Prize nominee and received the Presidential Medal of Freedom. In 2023, her portrait was placed in the Texas Senate Chamber, making her only the second Black person (after U.S. Rep. Barbara Jordan) so honored. In January, Mattel introduced the “Opal Barbie.”

Opal Lee on her Juneteenth walks: “If people can be taught to hate, they can be taught to love. The promise of freedom is only as strong as those who choose to uphold it. Will you rise to the occasion or stand still as history passes you by?”

BELOW Lee, on her porch in November 2025, lives on the same Fort Worth plot where, in 1939, a mob burned down her family's home.

Despite it all, Lee lives in a modest new house on Fort Worth's East Annie Street—on the same corner lot where, in 1939, her family's home was burned down by a mob of 500 angry would-be neighbors who objected to the family integrating the neighborhood. It happened on Juneteenth.

Her new house was a gift from Trinity Habitat for Humanity in 2024 as a tribute to Lee, one of the nonprofit's founding board members.

The Marshall native was a child when she first learned about the date June 19, 1865, when Union Gen. Gordon Granger arrived in Galveston to make the first notifications that enslaved Texans were free—two and a half years after President Abraham Lincoln signed the Emancipation Proclamation. She joined family and friends annually to celebrate the day with “plenty of food, food and more food.”

Lee was a co-founder in 1977 of the Tarrant County Black Historical and Genealogical Society, through which she organized Fort Worth's Juneteenth events, including walks, for 40 years. But she felt there was more she could do.

A quest was born: Make Juneteenth a national holiday.

Her plan was to walk to D.C. and present a signed petition to Congress as a symbol of nationwide support for passage

*I don't feel no ways tired,
I've come too far from where I started from.
Nobody told me that the road
would be easy,
I don't believe He brought me this far to leave me.*

of the Juneteenth National Independence Day Act. Forty-seven states, including Texas, had already established state holidays or observances.

The octogenarian took to the road, her T-shirt emblazoned with “Opal’s Walk for Freedom,” and was joined by thousands of diverse supporters, many carrying homemade signs of support (“Go, Ms. Opal!”) and walking with her in festive, joyous parades.

“I just started walking, and people started participating, coming to join me, finding a place for me to stay,” she said. “I got 1.5 million signatures. I met all kinds of people, not just those in power. People who were beginning to understand what the day was all about. Not just red soda water and barbecue, but there was meaning to it. People embraced Juneteenth.”

The distance between Fort Worth and D.C. is a little over 1,200 miles as the crow flies. Lee took the scenic route, walking a symbolic 2.5 miles (for the two and a half years it took for news of emancipation to reach Texas) in 20 cities that supported her movement and invited her to walk, including Shreveport, Louisiana; Atlanta; Milwaukee, Wisconsin; Pueblo, Colorado; Chicago; and Philadelphia.

She began the walks in September 2016 and four months later was in Washington with the completed petition. Almost five years later, the act passed and was signed into law by President Joe Biden on June 17, 2021.

“I was so happy, I could have done a holy dance!” Lee says.

The crown jewel for her work is the $70 million state-of-the-art National Juneteenth Museum slated to break ground in Fort Worth later this year. The 50,000-square-foot cultural center is billed as “the epicenter for the preservation of Juneteenth history.”

“Dr. Lee’s advocacy is the foundation on which the museum was established,” says Jarred Howard, the museum’s CEO. “We’re thrilled to collaborate with Dr. Lee and are committed to expanding her extraordinary legacy through the creation of a world-class learning center.”

Though she isn’t moving quite as much now, Lee’s family is gladly taking the baton to keep her legacy going. Her granddaughters are active board members for Lee’s non-

“It’ll take more than one person to fill her shoes,” Roland says, “so it will truly be a family effort. She still has a lot of fire, but it’s time for us to do the heavy lifting.”

Lee’s fire has always been about teaching and the fertile minds of young folks, and that flame burns as brightly as ever, sparked by her successful Juneteenth campaigns.

“I want the young people to realize how important Black history is and for them to embrace it, know their history and pass it on,” she says. “The road to true freedom is long, but I’ve walked it my whole life.” ■

J.O. WAS HERE

The history of this Hill Country vista goes right through a century-old
Julian Onderdonk
painting

BY JOHN R. MILLARD

The west prong of the Medina River arises in Bandera County and flows eastward, fed by underground springs amid steep, canyon-carved terrain northwest of San Antonio. The flow traces a serpentine path through oak and cedar groves, rocky outcrops, and grassy slopes before joining the north prong near the town of Medina.

In 1915, this area was still a wild frontier—sparsely settled, with vast ranches dominating the landscape. The Medina Lake dam, completed in 1912, altered downstream flows, but the upper prongs retained their pristine character: clear waters, rocky riverbeds, and dense cedar and live oak groves.

It was beautiful country. I know this because Julian Onderdonk stopped here in 1915, set up an easel and canvas, and got to painting—and I can prove it.

It all started with a chance discovery: a digital image of an Onderdonk oil painting called Gulf Clouds in the Hills on the West Prong of the Medina River instantly caught my eye—not just for its beauty but for its uncanny resemblance to our land.

“Debra,” I called out to my wife, “you won’t believe it, but this is our property.”

I had just hiked those ridges that morning, stood on that same bluff and looked down at that same striated rock in the riverbed. The landscape in the painting wasn't just similar—it was ours.

What started as a curious observation turned into a historical investigation—one that led me through Texas archives, family lore and conversations with art experts, historians and ranchers. The deeper I dug, the more the story grew. Not just one painting but possibly four were painted by Onderdonk during a 1915 visit to what was then known as the Williams Ranch, now part of our West Prong Ranch.

We acquired the property in January 2024—one of seven tracts carved from the historic Garrison Ranch, originally established in the late 1800s. Like many historic properties, the ranch evolved over time—its boundaries reshaped by sales, inheritances and a legal dispute—but the same beauty remains.

John R. Millard was stunned to discover that a 1915 Julian Onderdonk painting, above, portrays a view he enjoys on his Bandera County property, opposite. It's undeniable, Millard says.

Gulf Clouds in the Hills on the West Prong of the Medina River

1915

Oil on panel

Lusher Art Collection

This painting demonstrates the complex geographic identity of San Antonio's countryside. The title and fluffy white clouds indicate the region's proximity to the Gulf Coast. Green hills, characteristic of Central and South Texas, form the horizon. The west prong, illustrated here, is one of two main sections of the Medina River. The nearly dry river exposes the limestone bed, and there is just enough water to reflect the blue sky.

The Man With the Brush

Often called the “Father of Texas Art,” Onderdonk left an indelible mark on American impressionism with his radiant Hill Country portrayals. Born in San Antonio in 1882, he trained under his father, artist Robert Jenkins Onderdonk, and later under William Merritt Chase in New York, honing his eye for light and texture.

Returning to Texas in 1909, Onderdonk fused Chase’s plein air, or open air, philosophy of painting outdoors with the rugged splendor of his homeland.

Onderdonk’s works—vibrant with color, delicately executed and alive with natural beauty—earned acclaim during his lifetime and reverence after his death in 1922.

Today his paintings command high prices: Blue Bonnet Field, Early Morning, San Antonio Texas sold for $515,000 in 2013. Two other pieces sold for $317,000 and $281,000 at that same auction in Dallas. His works have been on display in all of Texas’ major art museums, and several paintings even hung in the Oval Office when George W. Bush was president.

Each of the four 1915 paintings features terrain elements that resemble areas on or near our property—with live oaks, horizon lines and familiar contours we can still observe today. While there’s no direct evidence or documentation of such an excursion, the visual similarities raise the possibility they were painted during a multiday journey by mule into this remote region.

I hiked back out to the bend in the river and took a photo. From that vantage point, the similarities were undeniable. The limestone bluffs, the curve of the hills, the river’s arc and the distinctive limestone formations in the riverbed all aligned with striking precision—like fingerprints.

It was a match. Onderdonk’s Gulf Clouds in the Hills on the West Prong of the Medina River portrays the very terrain we now call home—capturing its distinctive topography with remarkable accuracy.

Collector of the Clouds

But for this discovery to be taken seriously, it needed more than compelling visual similarities; it needed validation from people who know Onderdonk best.

Art dealer Harry Halff is the foremost authority on Onderdonk and author of the artist’s catalogue raisonné—the definitive scholarly resource documenting the artist’s body of work.

“There is no doubt in my mind that the painting’s location is on your ranch,” Halff wrote in an email after reviewing the photographic comparisons and supporting documentation. “This may be one of the rare Onderdonk landscapes still visually tied to a named site today.”

Ted Lusher agreed with that assessment. He’s a respected collector of Texas art and history whose personal archive includes rare artifacts of Texas and Onderdonk’s original Gulf Clouds in the Hills itself.

“There’s no question in my mind,” he wrote of the similarities to our land. “The alignment of terrain and artistic detail is too precise to be coincidental.”

In 1915, traveling from San Antonio to Bandera County—about 50 miles away to the northwest—was challenging. With FM 337 not established until 1945, Onderdonk would have traveled over steep dirt trails and caliche paths, common in rural Texas at the time.

Automobiles like the Ford Model T had existed since 1908 but were impractical in the Hill Country’s rough conditions, especially for an artist of modest means. Instead, Onderdonk likely used horse-drawn transport, such as wagons or buggies for flatter areas, and possibly mules for the steeper terrain.

Half notes that Onderdonk was “not averse to long hikes in the country,” often walking out into the hills armed with his easel, canvas and paints.

While Half has not found any direct references to mule travel, he considers it “entirely plausible” that Onderdonk may have ridden by mule into more remote terrain.

The Muleman Next Door

That brings us to Paul Garrison III, our neighbor and a skilled mule skinner.

Garrison's family has lived and ranched on this land for five generations, and he carries forward the family legacy as the owner of Garrison Mulemanship and Training, a program known far and wide for cultivating the unique partnership between mules and their handlers.

Garrison and I discussed how Onderdonk might have reached this rugged, steep land more than a century ago. “There's no way he got there by car,” he said. “You'd need a good mule—maybe two. This is classic mule country.”

Before the Garrison family—and long before us—the land was known as the Williams Ranch. One of its earliest first-hand accounts comes from Samuel H. Sutton, who was born in 1850 and moved here in 1876.

One memory stood out for Sutton, writing for Frontier Times Magazine in 1928: He and his wife were washing clothes at the confluence of Cazey Creek and the west prong of the Medina River when they were surprised by Native Americans on a bluff above them. Sutton grabbed his rifle, his heart pounding. The moment passed without violence, but the tension and terrain left a mark on him.

His description of the bluff and the wash spot corresponds closely to the same curve and elevation where Gulf Clouds in the Hills was likely painted. It's fascinating to think that within a few decades, this same bluff and river could have been the setting for a settler's tense moment and an artist's quiet observation.

Preserving the View

One of the most remarkable aspects of this story is how little the land has changed, and Debra and I are determined to keep it that way. We've intentionally avoided building in areas that would disrupt the natural setting and have left existing trails undisturbed.

For us, this land has become something rare—a kind of living time machine. The terrain remains so untouched, the features so distinctive, that the gap between today and 1915 seems to vanish.

Visitors notice it, too. When we show them the digital image of the painting beside the actual view, there's often a long pause, followed by some variation of: “This place hasn't changed at all.”

In a constantly evolving world, finding proof that a landscape has stayed so consistent is unusual. The land reflects the same beauty Onderdonk captured, and now, more than a century later, we can see it just as he did.

As landowners, we're stewards of something much greater than ourselves. Our ranch is more than just acreage. It's a living gallery—one that requires no velvet ropes, no security guards and no admission fee. Just boots, curiosity and a willingness to see.

We didn't set out to uncover a hidden chapter in Texas art history. But once we realized what we were standing on, it became clear: This land belongs to history. To Onderdonk. To Sutton. To the Garrisons. And to everyone who's ever paused to marvel at the way clouds move across the hills.

Gulf Clouds in the Hills isn't just oil on canvas. It's evidence. That Onderdonk stood here. That he saw what we see. And that he found it beautiful enough to preserve forever.

We're honored to be part of that continuum. ■

Our Bone-ified Best Blade

This knife says you're no one to mess with

"It's a beautiful knife with a great blade and a sure grip"

— William B. Wilmington, NC

My friend Sergio is a mixed martial arts fighter. His shoulders are broad. His muscles have muscles. He's not the kind of person you want to be on the wrong side of.

This manly man has a saying about being tough: You should either know how to fight or look like you do.

The message is simple enough. People spoiling for a fight usually don't pick the biggest guy in the bar. If you look like someone who shouldn't be messed with, you likely won't be. With our Blue Bone Bowie Knife on your hip, that's exactly the message you'll send.

As beautiful as it is functional, this knife is 10" overall and features a high-quality 420 surgical stainless steel blade with a serrated spine. The handle is constructed of genuine natural bone with redwood spacers. On the handle you'll find design work that's carved by hand, a testament to its craftsmanship.

This knife is stick tang, meaning it won't wimp out when you need it. This knife also features brass hand guards and brass spacers with file work, so you won't lose your grip. For easy carrying, it comes with a genuine tooled leather sheath. CALL NOW! If you're one of the first 700-587 callers for this ad, we'll throw in a pair of Stauer Pocket Binoculars — a $99 value — ABSOLUTELY FREE!

Walk around with the Blue Bone Bowie Knife and you'll feel a lot safer. I know I do.

Home Is Where Our Heart Is

ALL OF US at Trinity Valley Electric Cooperative want to see our community succeed because we live here too. Our board of directors and employees are local people working for local good. That's the essence of Cooperative Principle No. 7, Concern for Community.

First and foremost, we strengthen our community by doing what we do best: providing reliable electricity to our members at a reasonable cost.

We're a dynamic part of our community, and as the area grows, so does our electric distribution system. We pursue policies and projects that benefit the community because what's good for our community is good for our cooperative.

Our roots are here, and we've been in business here for more than 85 years. You can feel assured that we're not going anywhere.

We pay our employees fair wages, which helps strengthen the economy when they spend that money locally. And by providing well-paying jobs, we keep our towns healthy, ensuring employees and their families don't have to move away to make a living. The more people we have here paying taxes and patronizing local businesses, the more vibrant our community will be. Strengthening our local economy makes sound business sense.

But the benefits to the community aren't just economic. We open doors for our young people with scholarship programs and the Government-in-Action Youth Tour trip to Washington, D.C., each June. We teach children safety through programs in schools and online.

We help our members save money and reduce their environmental impact by recommending energy efficiency measures. We strengthen the community by supporting nonprofits. We help our members and neighbors in need by contributing to efforts like food drives and grants to local organizations. 188635001

The co-op is made up of people who care. Our employees go out of their way to better their communities. They coach youth sports teams, serve on school committees and participate in church activities. They are co-op members like you, and like you, they want to make their hometowns stronger.

Remember—when it comes to TVEC, our community is where our hearts are. ■

Know the Signs of Heat-Related Illness

DURING EXTREMELY HOT and humid weather, your body's ability to cool itself is challenged. When the body heats too rapidly, or when too much fluid or salt is lost through dehydration or sweating, body temperatures rise. It's important to know the symptoms of extreme heat exposure and the appropriate responses.

Heat cramps may be the first sign of heat-related illness and may lead to heat exhaustion or stroke. The symptoms are heavy sweating and painful muscle cramps and spasms, usually in the legs and abdomen.

Apply firm pressure on cramping muscles or gently massage to relieve spasms. Give sips of water unless the person complains of nausea—then stop giving water. Seek immediate medical attention if cramps last longer than one hour.

Signs of heat exhaustion include weakness or tiredness; cool, pale, clammy skin; a fast, weak pulse; dizziness, nausea or vomiting; headache; and fainting.

Move the person to a cooler environment, preferably an air-conditioned room. Loosen clothing. Apply cool, wet cloths or have the person sit in a cool bath. Offer sips of water. Seek immediate medical attention if the person vomits or if symptoms worsen or last longer than one hour.

Heat stroke symptoms include a throbbing headache; confusion; slurred speech; nausea; dizziness; a body temperature above 103 degrees; hot, red, dry or damp skin; a rapid and strong pulse; and loss of consciousness.

Call 911 or get the victim to a hospital immediately. Heat stroke is a serious medical emergency, and delay can be fatal.

Move the victim to a cooler, preferably air-conditioned, environment. Reduce body temperature with cool cloths or a bath. Use a fan if heat index temperatures are below the high 90s. A fan can make you hotter at higher temperatures. Do not give fluids.

A Career and a Commitment to Cooperative Values

Sam Grimes first real job turned into a lifetime of service to TVEC members

WITH 45 YEARS OF SERVICE under his belt, Sam Grimes, operations superintendent, will tell you that working at the electric co-op is the only job he's ever had, but his first career choice didn't involve climbing poles. There was another high-adrenaline pastime that caught his attention.

"When I was a freshman, I went out with my oldest brother and some guys who talked me into getting on a bull," he said. "I wasn't on there for long but I was hooked. I quit football and other sports and decided that was what I was going to do."

Grimes traveled the bull riding circuit for a while, with supportive parents making some long drives to get him back home. After a while though, and with a new bride at home, priorities changed.

"I'd been married about a month, and one day my wife was getting herself ready for work and she just looked at me and said, 'Are you ever going to get a real job?' to which I replied 'I'm a bull rider.'" he said. "But after that I was riding with a buddy who worked at Kaufman County Electric Co-op. I told him I guessed it was time to find a job, and he took me to meet Lawrence Sweat and Kenneth Patton, and they just asked when I could start."

It turned out that working with electricity and riding bulls had just enough in common to keep things interesting. The ability to manage risk and perform under pressure were assets that helped Grimes excel in his new career.

"There is just something when you climb on in the chute, you pull on that rope, and you are just at a point where you have to nod your head to let them know you are ready to go. There is a rush that comes over you and you are committed to whatever is about to happen,” he said. “It is the same for climbing a pole. You don’t know the feeling until you put the hooks on and start up there but once you are 30-40 feet up there and it is just you up there—you have to be a little bit of a thrill-seeker I guess, but you are able to make it a manageable risk and do it safely.”

Sam Grimes (right) time in TVEC operations has given him a chance to impact younger co-op employees like Shayde Harrison, who is now a TVEC Operations Manager.

Like many TVEC employees, Sam grew up in Kaufman County, where the Grimes family still has a large presence. His father Ken was well known for his skill with leatherwork and saddle making and his mother’s family has deep roots in the Jiba area south of Kaufman.

“You know I remember a time that driving up to Forney for something was sort of an all day trip, and it was all farmland and cotton fields,” Grimes said.

“Now I might be up there two or three times in a day for work, and to see the growth we’ve had in even the last 10 years is pretty unbelievable.”

With his current responsibilities managing the construction of electrical infrastructure for new residential subdivisions, Grimes sees the rapid change in the landscape firsthand.

“It does amaze me that now that you can drive north out of Kaufman or Crandall and really never leave the city,” Grimes said. “And along with all of the houses, we are really seeing the commercial growth coming in, along with other large loads like the schools. It has changed a lot, and we have changed a lot with how we do things as well.”

Grimes noted that the incredible growth and technological change has both challenges and benefits. As the co-op grows it can adopt newer technologies and equipment to improve service and reliability, but he doesn’t want that to affect the personal service that the company has been known for.

Grimes’ career at the co-op has included many roles over the years, including lineman, safety coordinator, service man and now operations superintendent over underground construction.

“You have to understand how far things have come. For example, when I started, if you were on call after hours and a member called in a problem, the lineman would come pick you up and then you’d go to the office to look up an address and head out to look at it,” he said. “Now we have so much more information just ready for us on an iPad and we can respond so much more quickly. But the biggest thing that separates us from investor-owned companies is that we have the people you can reach out to directly and talk to a person. I don’t want to lose that. The electricity is the same, but the personal relationships is what makes us different.”

Keeping that service-first mindset is something that Grimes hopes the co-op can hold onto through the growth.

“I give full credit to the board and the management that we have, who are really committed to what the co-op has always been about, that personal connection,” he said. “And I am very optimistic about the future of the co-op because I think a lot of these younger guys are learning it too. They are smart and they want to do it. That’s kind of what I say, you have to want to, or you are never going to do it.”

The electric career has been an unqualified success, but Grimes didn’t exactly give up on his first love of cowboy activities. He is still an active roper, with no plans to stop any time soon. The TVEC service area may become more urban in places, but the country roots are still there.

“Me and my brothers, we are in our sixties now, but we’ve always had horses and that is something I love to do,” he said. “We keep some roping steers out in Ola and just keep that up because that is what we grew up around.” ■

Grimes maintains a small herd of cattle in Kaufman County and is an active team roper at area competitions.

Why Timing Matters

Help keep electric rates low
by keeping an eye on the clock

WE ALL HAVE energy-use patterns—videos to stream, dishes to wash and laundry to do. But we all tend to use the most electricity during two “peak” periods: when we are home before and after school and work.

But why does Trinity Valley Electric Cooperative care about these use patterns? The price we pay for wholesale power rises and falls depending on how high those peaks are.

That means that flattening the curve—or shifting energy use to off-peak periods, when fewer people are adding demand to the electric grid—generally saves your co-op money. Those savings filter down to you and your neighbors.

On-peak power is more expensive because it requires the tapping of more expensive energy generation. Here’s a quick look at the types of power plants and fuels used to supply electricity at various times.

Baseload: These are large, efficient generating stations that provide enough dependable electric power at low cost to meet the minimum level of electricity needed at any given time. They do not start or stop quickly—they run around the clock.

Intermediate load: These plants handle sharp increases in demand, filling the gap between baseload plants and peaking plants. These facilities are larger, and therefore more efficient, than peaking plants.

Peak load: Though expensive and small, these plants can start generating power quickly when electric consumption reaches its highest point.

While it may not be reflected directly on your power bill, using more energy at off-peak times goes a long way to keeping the co-op’s rates as low as possible by reducing our wholesale power costs. ■

Career at the co-op

I have been in TVEC member services for slightly more than three years.

What do you enjoy most about your job?

I love my coworkers and being a part of the TVEC family.

What is the key to providing great service?

I think listening to members’ needs is important, then being kind and treating everyone with respect.

One thing you’d like to remind members about?

Members should know that, during an outage, we want to get their power back on just as quickly as they do. We do everything we can to help expedite the process, but depending on the cause or type of damage that the crews may be working on, those things are out of our control.

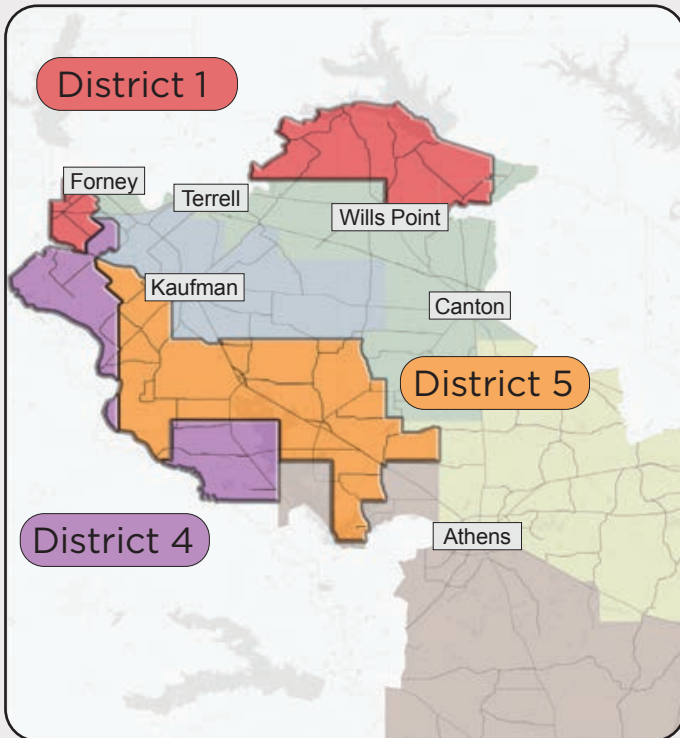

Notice of Board Election

Trinity Valley Electric Cooperative will hold an election for the board members representing District 1 (incumbent: Carolyn Minor), District 4 (incumbent: Derrick Hoelscher) and District 5 (incumbent: Ed Reeve) in conjunction with the annual meeting to be held in October.

As a member, if you are interested in having your name placed before the nominating committee to represent your district, you must complete a nomination form. Qualifications are included on the form.

Contact Leah Bass at (469) 376-2297 to obtain a nomination form. Forms must be received at the TVEC headquarters office in Kaufman by 4:45 p.m. July 1.

Check your billing statement or call TVEC member services at 1-800-766-9576 to verify your board district.

Ditch Dim Lights for Safety and Energy Efficiency

IF THE LIGHTS in your home seem to be getting dim, whether it's because of aging bulbs or your eyesight, then it might be time to improve the illumination. Focusing on upgrading to energy-efficient light bulbs such as LEDs also can help you save money on electricity.

In the bathroom, the strip of lights above your vanity or sink might not be enough to stay safe in a room where the floor is often wet. Have an electrician add some lights or upgrade the fixture.

Consider adding overhead lighting, as well. A single fixture isn't as efficient as several ceiling-hung or recessed lights. Another light on the ceiling of the shower will help you see better in a part of the bathroom that's often used but usually a bit dark.

Install task lighting under cabinets in the kitchen so it shines on the counters where you cut up vegetables and handle hot food. Wired LED lights are easy to install, or there are simple battery-powered lights that stick on with adhesive or magnets.

For more natural light, keep blinds and other window coverings open so sunshine can wash over the whole house and brighten it up during the daytime. ■

Carrera's Authentic Mexican

Great Tex-Mex in the co-op's front yard

IT SHOULD BE NO SURPRISE THAT MEXICAN FOOD has featured in this column three months in a row now. But the abundance of Tex-Mex options is really something to celebrate.

For Operations Superintendent Sam Grimes, a Kaufman local, Carrera's Authentic Mexican restaurant is his regular go-to when the fajitas are calling.

"The food is great, and I've never had a meal there that I didn't like," Grimes said. "The service is always great and Ishmael Carrera, he's such a friendly guy. He's going to make sure you are doing OK."

Menu choices cover all of the Tex-Mex standards, with a few tasty surprises like Carrera's Snapper, which arrives steaming at your table in a foil balloon.

Carrera's is open for breakfast as well with omelettes or huevos rancheros to start any day right.

Carrera's Authentic Mexican Restaurant is located at 1603 S. Washington Street in Kaufman, and online at carrerasauthenticmexicantx.com. ■

May Energy Quiz: Musical Energy

SILVER MAY BE second place on the medal stand, but it is on top of the list for electricity conductors.

Scientifically, that is the result of having the highest number of free-moving electrons and other properties.

Of course the cost would be prohibitive to run silver wiring for electrical distribution. For the best conductivity-to-price ratio, utilities use aluminum wiring that is strengthened with steel cores that can hold up to long spans and harsh weather conditions.

Congratulations to our April Energy Quiz winner, Gloria Parramore of Forney.

Clothed in Grace Brings Timely Assistance For Kids in Need

CHILDREN IN FOSTER CARE ARE often have very little say in what is happening in their lives, but thankfully there are people who feel called to provide help for both kids and foster families. “Clothed in Grace started really just from a pull in our hearts to help in the foster community, but we realized very quickly that our calling wasn’t to be foster parents,” said Becca Tilley, who started the charity. “We just asked what it is that we could do, and we took on the idea from this saying in the foster care world that everyone can do something.”

That something turned out to be filling a need that was currently unmet in Kaufman County and surrounding areas—a resource to provide supplies, clothing and immediate needs as foster children and caseworkers navigate the system.

“We were able to help about 450 individuals last year and that continues to grow.” Tilley said. “Sometimes that is a new case that has come up or for kinship groups where a child has been moved. Those kinship families are very special to us because they don’t receive the same support as the foster families so sometimes we are able to step in to help them prepare, whether it is grandparents taking care of grandkids or other family members.”

TVEC Public Relations Supervisor Laura Melton presented Becca Tilley of the Clothed in Grace Foster Closet with a grant from the TVEC Charitable Foundation, funded by TVEC members.

Another way Clothed in Grace provides is with unique birthday boxes for foster care kids.

“We have had multiple caregivers reach back out to us to say how much it has meant to the kids,” Tilley said. “We have had an 18-year-old had never really had her birthday celebrated. For a lot of them birthdays can be overlooked, and that comes with a lot of mixed emotions and confusion for these kids who are reminded that they are not with their biological family.”

You can hear more about Clothed in Grace on the April TVEC Consider it Hot podcast at tvec.net/podcast. Find out more at about Clothed in Grace at clothedingracetx.org.

The Cowboy Life

Charles Siringo's writing bears witness to a life on the trail of cattle and outlaws

BY DAVID MCCORMICK

IF YOU MET CHARLES SIRINGO in 1927 Los Angeles, you couldn't have guessed that he was a legend of the Old West. That year, Neil Clark, writing for The American Magazine, described Siringo as "a small man, weighing barely a hundred and thirty pounds, but wire-tough, brown of face, and keen of eye, with humor still invincible in spite of his seventy-two years, and a mind razor-sharp for accuracy and pertinent detail."

Yet Siringo had written a handful of books about his incredible adventures—as a trail-driving cowboy, detective, businessman and writer who had chased outlaws and infiltrated criminal networks—making him well-known among the cowboys who held his stories dear.

He was born February 7, 1855, in Matagorda County, and a year later his father died. Antonio Siringo had sailed from southern Italy and settled on Matagorda Peninsula with his wife, Bridgit, an Irish immigrant.

Charles Siringo made the name proud—riding, roping and writing his way to Hollywood over several decades. But he started out as a simple cowboy on Texas' coastal plains. In his autobiography A Lone Star Cowboy, he writes that he was 11 years old in 1867, when he "became a full-fledged cowboy, wearing broad sombrero, high-heeled boots, Mexican spurs, and the dignity of a full-grown man."

In another book—the first of his seven—A Texas Cow Boy or Fifteen Years on the Hurricane Deck of a Spanish Pony, Siringo described his first job on the Chisholm Trail, in the spring of 1876, driving a herd of 2,500 "mossy-horn steers" to Kansas for $30 a month. "Everything went on lovely with the exception of swimming swollen streams, fighting ... among ourselves and a stampede every stormy night."

For years, he steered longhorns along the dusty trail and labored under windswept downpours. Trailing into New Mexico atop his horse, Whiskey-Peet, and armed with a Sharps rifle, he prowled for outlaws and cattle rustlers along the way.

In 1884, Siringo married and briefly settled down in Caldwell, Kansas, where he became a restaurateur. In his off-hours, the honest-to-goodness cowpuncher began writing about his adventures as a way to earn some extra cash.

A Texas Cow Boy was published in 1885 to wide acclaim. Historian J. Frank Dobie called it one of the most important books on cowboy life. Will Rogers later wrote Siringo that this was the first book he had read and that it was the bible for cowboys.

The book tells of Siringo's years on the LX Ranch in the Panhandle, during which he met and later pursued outlaw Billy the Kid. He warmly writes about the Kid's compassionate side, relating a story of the outlaw coming to the aid of a sick man and personally paying for a team to haul him off to Las Vegas for treatment.

In 1886, Siringo joined the Pinkerton National Detective Agency, and for the next two decades lived by his wits on the road.

His work took him to Mexico City, Alaska and all points in between, and he is credited with making more than 100 arrests. And though he had a reputation as a fine shot, Siringo was proud that he made most of his arrests without violence.

In 1907, he quit the Pinkerton Agency and moved to his Sunny Slope Ranch in Santa Fe, New Mexico. There he wrote his second book, A Cowboy Detective, including his role in Idaho's Coeur D'Alene miners' strike of 1892. His task was to infiltrate the labor union and acquire proof of criminal acts.

"I had to take an iron-clad 'Molly Maguire' oath that I would never turn traitor to the union cause," he wrote. "If I did, death would be my reward." This was no idle threat on the part of the strikers, as they were guilty of blowing up mines and murdering workers. Siringo's testimony put 18 union leaders behind bars.

In the 1920s, Siringo moved to LA, where his friendship with William S. Hart earned him a view into the world of Hollywood as a consultant to the movie studios. Because of his prowess as a cowboy and Pinkerton detective, he established a rapport with famous Western figures, among them Rogers, Bat Masterson and Clarence Darrow.

When Siringo died October 18, 1928, at 73, Hart and Rogers sent a joint telegram expressing their sentiments; it read in part, "Another American plainsman has taken the long trail." ■

Go the Other Way

Eastern Central Texas' hill country also has plenty of wildflowers, rolling hills and history

BY W.F. STRONG • ILLUSTRATION BY CHRIS WORMELL

A GREAT MANY TEXANS set off for the Hill Country to enjoy the splendor of the wildflowers over the past couple of months. The blooms light up the hills and roadsides with carpets of vibrant color.

But I want to suggest that you consider the other hill country, composed of a gentler, less dramatic topography—one that also offers wildflowers galore and winding roads but has the advantage of being far less traveled.

You start in the small eastern Central Texas hamlet of Clay, between Brenham and Bryan, on FM 50, heading south. Here, you will encounter the first hill rising off the flatlands into a changing ecosystem. You can see the gentle rise sweep across

Once you get into Independence, which changed its name from Cole's Settlement around 1836 to honor Texas' freedom from Mexico, take a right on FM 390 and stay on that road almost all the way to Burton.

This is a famous scenic drive that passes through the old ghost town of Gay Hill. Wildflowers are often bountiful here. From Burton, continue on U.S. Highway 290 for a few miles and pick up State Highway 237 to Round Top.

Round Top was part of Stephen F. Austin's original colony. The town took its name from an octagonal tower constructed there in stagecoach days. Since the 1960s it's been known as a mecca for antique lovers. What I appreciate most about the road from Round Top to La Grange are the white fences that curve along emerald green pastures.

Once you get into La Grange on State Highway 159, you'll take a left on U.S. Highway 77, climb the big hill and head south out of town, crossing the Colorado River. La Grange is probably best known for the Chicken Ranch brothel, which ZZ Top and reporter Marvin Zindler made famous in the 1970s—or perhaps infamous. It's long gone, of course.

Just 4 miles down that road, you'll take a right on County Road 2436. Look to your left and, quite soon, you'll see the largest lawn mower graveyard you've ever seen. That's Keith's Lawnmower Repair. I'm not sure it's a good advertisement for Keith's skills, but maybe it's an endorsement of his genius as a seller of new mowers.

This road dead-ends into FM 609, where you'll take a left. Here, the hills get bigger and the wildflowers more robust.

Watch for a shed painted in the colors of the Texas flag, off to the left. It's magnificently situated among wildflowers—as if the shed is posing for you.

It won't be long before you will arrive in Flatonia, which isn't particularly flat (it was named for pioneer settler F.W. Flato). In Flatonia, pick up State Highway 95 headed south toward Shiner. On this stretch, you'll enjoy more rural roads, gentle hills and wildflowers, including panoramic views off to the west.

End your drive with a Shiner Bock at the oldest independent brewery in Texas. After a two-hour drive through wildflower country, you've earned a bock or two. ■

The Art of the Sandwich

Warm your heart with a meal dressed in layers

BY VIANNEY RODRIGUEZ, FOOD EDITOR

All my favorite things—brisket, butter, Texas toast and cheese— together in perfectly delicious harmony makes for one happy señorita. Whenever my husband cooks up a brisket, I always tuck away some in the freezer to whip up these sandwiches. Pair this sandwich with a glass of wine, an icy cold beer or a frozen margarita.

Brisket Grilled Cheese Sandwich

4 tablespoons (½ stick) butter, softened
4 slices thick-sliced white bread (often labeled Texas toast)
8 ounces sharp cheddar cheese, grated or sliced
16 ounces diced, cooked brisket, room temperature

1. Butter one side of each slice of bread.
2. On the unbuttered side of 2 bread slices, layer half the cheddar, brisket and other half of cheddar. Top with two remaining bread slices, butter side out, to make sandwiches.
3. Heat a large skillet over medium-high heat. Cook sandwiches 3–4 minutes on each side, or until both sides are golden brown.
4. Remove sandwiches from skillet, slice in half and serve warm.

Grilled Strawnana Hazelnut Sandwich

Grab a few napkins and get ready to sink your teeth into the sweetest twist on the classic PB&J. I love a peanut butter sammy, but the combination of berries and banana with chocolate hazelnut is everything I didn't know I needed!

- 1/3 cup chocolate hazelnut spread, such as Nutella
- 4 slices sourdough bread
- 1 cup strawberries, thinly sliced
- 2 bananas, thinly sliced
- 2 tablespoons (1/4 stick) butter

1. Spread hazelnut spread on one side of each slice of sourdough. Top two slices with strawberries. Top the other two slices with bananas.
2. Stack bread to make two sandwiches, pairing one strawberry-topped slice with one banana-topped slice, and evenly spread butter on each side of sandwiches.
3. Heat a skillet over medium-high heat. Cook sandwiches, covered, 3 minutes on each side, or until bread is lightly toasted.
4. Slice in half and serve warm.

A briny olive spread combines with a smorgasbord of cold cuts and cheese to create a mouth-watering BIG bite of a sandwich, and I am in love. The food processor does all the heavy lifting in this recipe, then the sandwich gets wrapped in foil and baked until warm. I cannot wait to make this sandwich again and again.

- 1 jar giardiniera (16 ounces), drained
- 1/2 of 10-ounce jar pimiento-stuffed Spanish queen olives, drained
- 1/2 of 10-ounce jar sliced Kalamata olives, drained

- 1/2 cup extra-virgin olive oil
- 1 loaf ciabatta bread, sliced horizontally
- 1/4 cup red wine vinegar
- 1 tablespoon dried oregano
- 8 ounces sliced Black Forest ham
- 4 ounces sliced hard salami
- 4 ounces sliced mortadella
- 8 ounces sliced provolone cheese

COOK'S TIP: The sandwich may be refrigerated overnight (wrapped in aluminum foil). If doing this, take it out of the refrigerator about 45 minutes before baking. Increase the baking time to 20–22 minutes.

1. Preheat oven to 375 degrees. In a food processor, combine giardiniera, olives and oil and pulse until a uniform mixture forms. Brush both cut sides of bread with vinegar and sprinkle with oregano.
2. Place bottom half of the loaf on a piece of aluminum foil large enough to wrap around the entire sandwich. Layer meats and provolone on bread. Top with olive mixture. Place top half of bread on sandwich and wrap foil around sandwich.
3. Place wrapped sandwich on a baking sheet and bake 15–17 minutes, until thoroughly heated. Remove foil, slice into individual portions and serve.

These easy sandwiches have it all: sweet slices of ham, gooey Swiss cheese, and rolls that stay soft and fluffy on the inside with a perfectly toasted top. The secret is marinating them overnight in a savory butter sauce. They are delicious and a great dish for making in advance.

- 16 ounces sliced ham
- 16 ounces sliced Swiss cheese
- ½ cup (1 stick) butter
- ½ teaspoon poppy seeds
- 1 tablespoon minced onion

- ½ tablespoon yellow mustard

1. Slice rolls in half and arrange bottom halves in a baking dish. Layer with ham and Swiss. Place top halves of the rolls over cheese.
2. In a saucepan over medium-high heat, melt butter. Add poppy seeds, onion, steak sauce and mustard and cook 1 minute. Pour mixture over sandwiches, spreading evenly.

3. Cover baking dish with aluminum foil and refrigerate overnight.
4. Preheat oven to 350 degrees and bake sandwiches, still covered by foil, 10 minutes. Remove foil and cook 10 minutes uncovered. Serve warm.

Hacks for Your Stacks

Great sandwiches are all about high-quality ingredients and technique. Here are some secrets from my kitchen.

USE THOSE LEFTOVERS

Last night's shredded or roasted chicken or pork loin transform into a tasty lunch.

NO MAYO, NO PROBLEM

Pesto, ranch dip, hummus or sour cream with hot sauce can easily fill in for mayonnaise.

SEASON YOUR TOMATOES

Please! A little salt and pepper go a long way. And slice them with a serrated knife for the cleanest cut.

DON'T HOLD THE HERBS

Make your sandwich pop with a sprinkle of fresh dill, thyme or basil.

In fact, when travelers approached the mountains around the boomtown of Virginia City, Nevada in the 1850s, they were startled to see the hills shining in the sunlight like a mirror. A mirage caused by weary eyes? No, rather the effect came from tiny flecks of silver glinting in the sun.

Play Time on the Prairie

The 'Fort Griffin Fandangle' is a spectacle like no other

BY CHET GARNER

I ARRIVED IN ALBANY, northeast of Abilene, just as the summer heat began to loosen its grip and the sky softened to a dusty pastel. I took my seat in the open-air Prairie Theater with 1,000 other folks who had all made the pilgrimage to witness the oldest outdoor musical in the state: the Fort Griffin Fandangle. The place was buzzing with anticipation, and I could see hundreds of costumed performers waiting in the ranks as saddled horses trotted offstage.

This was Albany's Super Bowl, and it was almost game time. Every year, a cast of 250 performers, horses, longhorns and a robotic snake rehearse for months in preparation for the last two weeks in June, when Fandangle takes the stage. The shows are June 19–20 and 26–27 this year.

The tradition goes back to 1938, when Robert Nail Jr., a high school teacher and amateur playwright, penned a musical about the history of Shackelford County. Nearly 90 years later, it's still going strong.

For the next few hours, I watched neighbors become pioneers, soldiers, ranchers and Comanche warriors, telling their collective story through songs, dance and a few gunfights. The narration carried us through settlement, struggle and celebration, but the real magic came from the sheer number of people involved—kids, parents, grandparents—sometimes three generations sharing the same spotlight.

There's something incredibly charming about knowing the singing cowboy or cancan dancer could be the local custodian, lawyer or barista. It was meaningful when it needed to be and at times completely ridiculous.

As the last song rang out across the prairie and the cast took their final bows, I felt like I had witnessed something deeply personal for Albany but also important for everyone. To quote its creator, Mr. Nail, "You can never be who you're supposed to be until you know who you've been." ■

ABOVE A cast of 200-plus stages the Fort Griffin Fandangle in Albany, continuing a tradition that goes back to 1938.

Papa Hits His Stride

Fatherhood becomes grand when you get a second go

BY MARK TROTH

ILLUSTRATION BY URAN DUO

GENERATION GAPS CAN BE measured in years but also in opinions and outlooks.

And as parents continue a decades-long trend of having children later in life, I wonder what will become of the growing gap between grandchildren and their grandparents. After all, a 60-year age difference between a Baby Boomer and his grandkids (I was a child of the 1960s) is bound to create more difficulty in finding common ground.

My dad was a hardworking, principled man of few words and a strong code of ethics. I didn't challenge him often. Serious father-son conversations usually assured a quiet peace. Though as he aged, Dad mellowed, especially with my children. And now that I'm the next generational Papa, it all makes perfect sense to me.

After retiring in 2023, my wife, Mary, and I relocated to Washington County—just an hour commute to the grandkids. We touch base daily and get together often, but the most special times are when they visit us in Chappell Hill for holidays or long weekends.

With these extended stays, I can play the grandfather role 24/7 and share my pearls of wisdom, old jokes and timeless stories that are, of course, always new to them. My son and daughter just roll their eyes.

Not unlike my dad, I bring a renewed patience and tolerance to my grandkids that may have been a bit lacking with my own children. As a father, work pressure, financial obligations and just plain life often got in the way.

Now, we are second in line with regard to child-raising responsibility. Mary and I assist, advise, support, nourish, teach and console—but rarely mandate.

Ten years now into full grandparent mode, my elder wisdom serves me well. I'm the peacemaker between siblings and cousins, the answerer to boundless questions, the blocks and puzzles play partner on the floor (getting back up is the hard part), the safety foot on the Kubota pedal while they steer, the fishing partner who takes the perch off the hook, the positive "get 'em next time" coach, a second—perhaps more seasoned and sympathetic—ear when they're troubled, and any other role that needs filling.

Yet I must be cautious to always support and respect my son's and daughter's parental initiatives.

If there is a generational gap with our grandchildren, Mary and I have bridged it with a circle of life and love. It is a second chance for Papa and Mimi to get it right.

It's been said, "Dearer than our children are the children of our children." Is there anything more grand than that? ■
